43rd Annual NADE Conference

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

On behalf of the NADE Executive Board, I invite you to join NADE for our 43rd Annual Conference. Make plans now to join us March 6-9, 2019, in Atlanta, Georgia — at the beautiful Atlanta Marriott Marquis Hotel — a recently redesigned hotel in the heart of the downtown Atlanta area. It's considered a leading destination for dining, shopping, and shares a beautiful view of Atlanta.

The conference theme this year is Prepared for Takeoff! The theme's focus is intended to provide NADE attendees with current trends, advice, and a wealth of best practices from our field to address all of the recommended reform changes. The conference committee has been working hard to develop an incredible selection of workshops and speakers to renew and motivate you!

So, do not miss out! Make plans now to join us in Atlanta, Georgia to celebrate and share in the great work being done by developmental educators all across this nation and by our partners around the world.

43rd Annual NADE Conference

Keynote Speakers

Carolyn Denard is Associate Provost for Student Success and Professor of English at Georgia College and State University, where she has oversight of seven units devoted to student success inside and outside of the classroom: The Academic Advising Center, the Writing Center, the Learning Center, the Testing Center, the First-Year Bridge Scholars Program, the Honors Programs, and the Leadership Programs. As Director of the Center for Student Success, her goals are to make sure that all students progress successfully to graduation in four years and that they take advantage of the high impact practices that can enhance their educational experience overall.

Dr. Denard's first-hand understanding of student performance inside the classroom and the ways in which college resources and faculty expectations can impact the level of that performance inform her knowledge of successful student development. She says as a teacher, her greatest joy has always been moving her students from point A to point B—helping them to have that “aha” moment when they finally get the lesson being taught and can move forward and use that knowledge independently. Through in-service teaching workshops and departmental and professional conference presentations, she has shared with faculty ways to shape their pedagogy to help students become confident and independent learners.

Dr. Denard received her B.A. in English from Jackson State University; her M.A.T. in English from Indiana University, and her PhD in American Studies from Emory University. She has served as a Faculty Fellow at the Georgia Board of Regents, a Women's Studies Fellow at Emory University, and has been a recipient of Anne Harris Fellowship from the American Association of University Women and the W.E.B. Du Bois Center at Harvard University. Her work in private colleges and state universities has given her a broad view of student success and the tools that professionals in developmental education can use to help all students succeed.

43rd Annual NADE Conference

Alex Madva is an assistant professor of philosophy at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona (Cal Poly Pomona). His research centers on the questions that developments in social psychology raise for philosophy of mind, philosophy of race and feminism, and applied ethics, especially prejudice and discrimination. Alex has written or co-written articles on these topics for journals including Noûs, Ethics, Pacific Philosophical Quarterly, Ergo, Synthese, and Mind and Language. He is currently co-editing two book volumes, An Introduction to Implicit Bias: Knowledge, Justice, and the Social Mind and Philosophers on the Movement for Black Lives.

Alex is also actively engaged in collaborative empirical research. One ongoing project explores the underlying psychological structure of stereotypes while another is testing interventions to reduce achievement gaps and increase belonging for members of underrepresented groups at Cal Poly Pomona, in disciplines such as physics, economics, mathematics, biology, and philosophy. His published and forthcoming research on these topics has appeared in journals including Ratio and the International Journal of STEM Education.

Alex received his BA in Philosophy and English at Tufts University and his MA and PhD from Columbia University. Alex has taught courses including Race and Racism in Western Thought, Cognitive Science, Feminist Philosophy of Science, Social and Political Philosophy, Contemporary Moral Problems, and upper-division undergraduate and graduate seminars on implicit bias, social psychology, and philosophy. He has led numerous workshops, keynote and plenary addresses, and training sessions on intergroup bias, stereotype threat, and impostor syndrome for schools, courts, and wider audiences.

43rd Annual NADE Conference

Pre-Conference Institutes ($50 each)

Wednesday	March 6, 2019	9:00 am – 12:00 pm
Presenter Name(s)	Session Title	Session Summary
Helen Burn	#1 – Transitioning Learners to Calculus in Community Colleges	This institute focuses on improving the transition of racially minoritized students into and through calculus. Participants will engage in interactive activities to identify areas of program improvement using a comprehensive model developed by the research team of Transitioning Learners to Calculus in Community Colleges (NSF IUSE 1625918, https://occr1.illinois.edu/tlc3).
Rebecca Goosen & Tanya Madrigal	#2: Building Successful Mathematics Co-Requisite Course from Start to Finish	San Jacinto College has redesigned the entire developmental/academic mathematics pathway. This session will demonstrate how the college was able to do this in alignment with pathways, the goals of the redesign and the results it is having on mathematics at the institution.
Miriam Moore	#3: Finding Wings (and Voices): Helping Multilingual Students Soar in IRW Classrooms	This interactive workshop presents strategies for helping multilingual writers soar in IRW classrooms, using the principles of the Writing about Writing (WAW) approach and English for Academic Purposes (EAP). The session covers five pedagogical tasks that can support students in establishing their identities as readers and writers: selecting appropriate content, scaffolding reading, meshing lexical and grammatical development, designing writing assignments, and responding to writing.

43rd Annual NADE Conference

		Pre-Conference Institutes $50 each
Wednesday	March 6, 2019	9:00 am – 12:00 pm
Robin Ozz	#4: Connect to Complete: How to Do Guided Pathways	Guided Pathways redesign is focused on student success, social justice, and decreasing the equity gap through comprehensive revisions that help students identify their educational and career goals, and then chart a clear, coherent pathway to timely goal completion. Students begin their pathway by taking courses shared among broadly related areas of study, allowing for early career exploration, contextualized learning, and meaningful connections. Guided Pathways provides a holistic learning experience that promotes self-fulfillment and includes carefully sequenced courses, predictable schedules, recognizable milestones, and ongoing integrated support services. Guided Pathways constitutes a transformation of an institution's structures, practices, policies, and procedures in every area. This preconference will help participants learn how to do that at their own institutions.
Wednesday	March 6, 2019	1:00 – 4:00 pm
Hunter Boylan	#5: Reforming Developmental Education: Perils and Possibilities (limit of 35 participants)	This institute engages participants in exploring reforms currently being advocated for developmental education. It describes popular reforms such as co-requisite remediation and multiple placement measures and provides data on what can reasonably be expected from their implementation. It engages participants in developing guidelines for effective implementation of these reforms through the use of handouts, worksheets, and participant involvement.

		Pre-Conference Institutes $50 each
Jennifer Ferguson, Linda Thompson, Jane Neuburger, and Karen Patty-Graham	#6: Assessing Student Success in the Midst of Change	This institute will address critical areas for assessing student success in the midst of our changing environment. Activities will include creating and measuring student learning objectives, understanding and interpreting standardized measures of student success, and time on Thursday evening dedicated to individual program data consultation.
Lisa Hoeffner	#7: The Developmental Classroom: Online! (and Hybrid): A Story of Failure and Redemption	“Online education for developmental students? Really?” That’s what I said to my dean ten years ago. Effectively teaching developmental courses online or hybrid is possible, but it requires rethinking traditional approaches. Come join this research-based interactive institute to learn how to create effective online and hybrid courses for developmental students.
Karon Klipple & Lisa Savcak	#8: Designing flexible math pathways options to support all students; lessons and results from the Carnegie Math Pathways	Policy changes are placing new demands on college mathematics departments. Learn how some faculty are meeting the demands by collaboratively developing co-requisite, online and accelerated versions of Carnegie's Statway and Quantway pathways. Review the CMP design model, examine new pilot results and lessons learned, and leave with course redesign strategies.

STUDY TOUR ($50)

Improving Academic Advisement through Predictive Analytics and Proactive Interventions

Wednesday, March 6, 1:00 – 4:00 pm

Tour will meet on Marquis Level near Area Attractions table at 12:30 p.m.

Georgia State University is proud to host NADE's study tour at our University Advisement Center (UAC). In 2012, GSU began the use of predictive analytics to track all students. Since then, their four-year graduation rates have improved by six percentage points. Students are also graduating more quickly. They are graduating 1,700 more students every year than they were five years ago, and the biggest gains have been enjoyed by low-income students, black students and Hispanic students. They have eliminated achievement gaps. Last year, they became the only national university at which black, Hispanic, first-generation, and low-income students graduated at rates at or above the rate of the student body overall. The presentation, tour, and demonstrations will take place at 25 Park Place in Suite 400.

Transportation Information

from Hartsfield Jackson Airport to Atlanta Marriott Marquis

- MARTA – Atlanta's rapid rail system MARTA is the easiest, fastest and most cost-effective way to travel between the Atlanta airport and the Marriott Marquis hotel. The airport MARTA station is located in the ground transportation area, near baggage claim. No cash or tokens are accepted at the MARTA turnstiles. Your "ticket" is a Breeze Card -- an electronic card that you purchase from a vending machine or MARTA ticket kiosk. Load cash value onto the card at time of purchase for anticipated trips. The one-way fare is $2.50. Round trip: $5.00. Tap your Breeze card at the turnstile to enter the station. The train platform is at the top of the escalators. Both trains that depart from the airport (the Gold line to Doraville, and the Red line to North Springs) travel north through downtown, and reach your destination – Peachtree Center Station – in 17 minutes. Trains run every 10 minutes on weekdays and every 20 minutes on weekends. Once at the

Annual Silent Auction

Prepare to bid on some “good finds” at the Annual NADE Silent Auction, running from Wednesday at 6:00 pm to Friday at 12:00 pm in the Exhibit Hall. All monies raised will go to support students with scholarships from NADE. Each Chapter is urged to bring at least one silent auction donation. Individual donations are also welcomed. Items may be dropped off in the registration area on Wednesday and Thursday. Do you have a special talent or skill you’d like to share? Feel free to donate an item for the auction and include your business card for reference.

Literacy Project

NADE is proud to partner with an elementary school in Georgia to promote literacy. We invite you to bring books for elementary age children in either English or Spanish to help this district ensure that every child has meaningful books available to read. If you would rather not carry books with you, we will have a table with the opportunity to donate cash, or purchase gift certificates from Scholastic. The school will use them to purchase books to fill the need. If you prefer, you may donate now by clicking here. “Write Literacy Project” in the Comment section.

Optional Area Tours

Wednesday, March 6

Dinner groups

Sign up to go to dinner with a group led by a volunteer from GADE, the host chapter of the conference. These groups will leave after attending the Grand Opening of Exhibits. Each pays for his/her own meal. More details to come!
